WHERE'STHE$41.000?

That Much of the Harlem Bank's Funds Still Unaccounted For.

Claims His Operations Were Sanctioned by the Directors.

The Shortage of $91,000 Had Been

A reporter for THE EVENING WORLD SAW Pinkham in the prison this morning and obtained a statement from him in regard to his arrest. He is about forty-five years old, tall and handsome, and his dark hair and mustache are tinged with gray.

SAYS EVERTTHING CAN BE EXPLAINED. The technical charge on which Pinknam has been indicted is for the larceny of two notes for $7,000 and $7,500, made by A. H. Wood and dated June 27, 1889, payable at the Bank of Harlem to the order of himself, and each indorsed by A. H. Wood and Louis

The A. H. Wood, who appears as the indorser on both notes, is the young Napoleon tures startled Harlem several years ago.

In answer to a request for an explanation of the transactions described in the memorandum furnished by the directors of the bank to the Grand Jury, Pinkham said this morn-

At that time it was known that Pinkham owed the bank $14,000 or $15,000, but the extent of his other transactions, which it appears involved the bank heavily, were not discovered until later. Even then no charge was brought against him till the present time.

W. W. Van Voorhis, who succeeded Pinkham as President of the Bank of Harlem, held that office only a few months, until President Porter was elected. Through his transactions with the firm of George W. Stetson & Co., fron dealers, in which he was interested, the bank lost $20,000. At the time of Stetson's failure it was found that Van Voorhis had loaned the firm $30,000, for the greater part of which he adequate security had been given.

"There is a great difference," he said, "between an actual indebtedness, which gives a ground for legal action, and losses which might have occurred through Pinkham's transactions, which are perfectly legal upon their face and which receive the sanction of the directors who frusted him.

"This $41,000 may be said to belong to the latter class. It figures as a loss in the books, and yet it cannot be directed charged to Pinkham."

"Such an array of figures without an explanation is entirely misleading. And further-more, as to the notes mentioned in the indictment as indorsed by Wood and Bressler, I amply secured them to the bank.

"They were the only creditors of the bank who received any money at all. L. Bressler died hopelessly insolvent, and his wife is now the janitress of a flat in Harlem.

"Previous to his death and insolvency I got deeds of several places of property he owned and other property of value, and secured the bank from loss as far as I could.

Charles H. Pinkham, jr., ex-President of the Harlem Hank, the story of whose arrest on an indictment by the Grand Jury for larceny in the first degree was told in last night's Sporting Extra of The Evening World, spent the night in a cell in the Tombs.

"They do not charge it directly either to myself or to Van Voorhis, who is a flugitive from justice in Mexico, I believe, and yet they try to make me responsible for it.

"I have admitted my indebtedness to the bank, and I have been likely either to myself or to Van Voorhis, who is a flugitive from justice in Mexico, I believe, and yet they try to make me responsible for it.

"I have admitted my indebtedness to the bank, and I have been likely either to myself or to Van Voorhis, who is a flugitive from justice in Mexico, I believe, and yet they try to make me responsible for it.

"I have admitted my indebtedness to the bank, and I have been sixteen and seventeen years old, and she is apparently quite indifferent regarding the murder of her child—the offspring of vice—and she joins with the actual perpetrators of the murder in wild, loud songs, coarse jests and boisterous laughter.

w I have admitted my indebtedness to the bank, and I have been liquidating it as rapidly as I could. I have made many payments, and I propose to pay it all up if they will let me do so.

"It seems very hard that I should be brought into this position at the present time, after they have known all the racts in the case for the last three years."

Mr. Pinkham said that he expected to be able to obtain ball sometime to-day, and that when the time came ne would make a full and satisfactory explanation of all the irregularities charged against him.

Mr. St. John has been one of the directors of the Hamilton Bank for some time. It was upon the report submitted by himself and Mr. Fosdick to Supt. Preston on April 30 showing the impairment of the capital of the Bank of Hariem to the extent of $73.000, or nearly three-quarters, that the indictment and arrest of Pinkham was decided upon by the State Superintendent.

Hariem while he was its President, from 1888 to 1800, of a large sum of money, and the directors say that the entire losses of the World Revenue police station and told Sergt. Edmund Brown that Peter Schuitz and Adam Haus had related to him a little while previously, while in their cups at a neighbour previously.

Harlem while he was its President, from 1885 to 1890, of a large sum of money, and the directors say that the entire losses of the bank through alleged diahonest transactions will reach $01,000. Of this sum $20,000 is alleged to have been lost through Pinkham's successor, W. W. Yan Voorhis, who is now in Mexico.

Pinkham's lawyers were sourrying all around town last night in their efforts to procure a bondsman for their client, but were unsuccessful. Judge Cowing, of Genoral Sessions, who issued the warrant, fixed bail at $7,000.

This morning two gentlemen called at the Tombs and saw Pinkham. They said they were his friends and were prepared to furnish ball for him.

His lawyer, Mr. Thompson, had not yet arrived, but it was said that Pinkham would placed the Baard of Directors of the Rank are included to the largest items of these great losses have only appeared to them would arrived, but it was said that Pinkham would probably and the police knew all then of the bady to have been lost through Pinkham's successor, W. President Porter states that he was able to collect only $10,000 of this indebtedness, and that by nursing securities turned over to the bank by Pinkham he had reduced the latter's indebtedness to $30,000.

This accounts for $50,000 of the total of $91,000 which the bank is claimed to have lost within the past three years, which includes an impairment of its $10,000 capital to the extent of nearly $73,000 and a loss of profits of $10,000.

Pinkham called attention to this fact this morning in his talk with the reporter.

"As President Porter figures it himself," he said, "I still owe the bank $30,000, but I assure you it is not as much as that, and Yan Yoorhis stuck them for $20,000. That makes $50,000.
